Representing agriculture as a producer and consumer of energy

Vote for S. 3711, the Gulf of Mexico Energy Security Act

A vote for the Gulf of Mexico Energy Security Act is a vote for agriculture!

- Did you know that a vote for the Gulf of Mexico Energy Security Act is a vote for agriculture's energy independence? The ethanol industry is the fastest growing renewable energy industry in the world. In 2006, USDA projects that 20 percent of the U.S. corn crop will be used for ethanol production, representing the fastest growing market for U.S. corn. A vote for the Gulf of Mexico Energy Security Act helps ensure that farmers who are fueling this new national energy source continue to have access to fertilizers and other inputs which are necessary for its production.
